May 7th Open Day Event Introducing The Puustelli Miinus Kitchen Range

Roundhay kitchen showroom, Four Season Interiors, have organised an Open Day Event for those who've not yet had an opportunity to see and learn more about the new Miinus kitchen range, the most recent addition to the showrooms offerings.

The Leeds showroom event will take place between 11am and 3pm on May 7th and there will be live cookery demonstrations delivered by top food stylist Tom Guise.

Other entertainment is also planned for the day and visitors can learn more about the range of AEG appliances that have been chosen to accompany the Scandinavian Eco Kitchen.

Four Seasons Interiors Design Director, Ian Sandford, talking about the event stated:

“Yorkshire and its people have a proud record of championing earth friendly products and on May 7th, they will discover that the Miinus kitchen range more than meets that criteria. So, for those seeking to invest in a truly pioneering kitchen range, whether it be for their home, a new development or whatever the project, we look forward to welcoming you on the day”

Notes to Editor:

The Puustelli Miinus kitchen's carbon footprint is up to 50 per cent less than that of a conventional kitchen.

The new kitchen range is, on average, 200 kilograms lighter than current kitchens allowing a reduction in emissions during transport.

The bio-composite, recyclable frame is called UPM ForMi and consists of 60 per cent polypropylene and 40 per cent wood fibre

The mix tolerates great variations in temperature, from -25 degrees up to +90 degrees centigrade.

The kitchen carcass frames are injection moulded and can be dismantled and re-erected several times.
